

LOVE ONE ANOTHER

We each contain a different world
Inside a human shell.
A world that waits to be explored
By those who know us well.
And yet to others we present
A puzzle to be solved,
While someone who looks deep enough
May find a heart of gold.

It's easy to condemn and judge,
To find fault here and there.
Much harder maybe to forgive
And show we really care.
For we are formed each one of us
As special and unique
And all that's asked of us is this
That we each other seek.

So when you look at me today
Don't judge by what you see.
Forget your preconceived ideas
Please find the real me.
And when I meet with you today
I'll search to find you too,
For loving one another
Is what we're asked to do.

Joan Humphreys

If you have some poetry or an article you would like to share please email to admin@inspirationalfriends.com or post it to Inspirational Friends Ltd 52 Hatch Ride, Crowthorne, Berks. RG45 6LB