

God's Love

The Archangel Metatron channelled by Edwin Courtenay

It is a popular misconception to believe the soul was created by the Divine. The truth of the matter is that the soul has always been and always will be. It began in a different place and in a different time, as part of the body of the Divine Source, God, as a cell within God's form. God's form existed outside of the reality that you have come to know as your home. This reality was not even created then and neither was time itself. But all of the souls that are in existence today were present within the body of God as cells within this great, cosmic body and it is these souls that were born into limited space and time when the Divine chose to populate this universe that it had created in order to experience reality here through these representations of its own being, through these microcosms of its own vast macrocosm.

When the souls of humanity and all other life forms in existence in the universe today existed within the body of God, they knew the absolute bliss of God's love. For God as a whole being loved itself completely, without judgement, wholly and truly. And every cell of its great cosmic body resonated and vibrated with a deep awareness of this self-love, giving each cell a sense of home within the body of the Divine Source. And at the point of birth into limited reality, when the cells of the body of God experienced the first separation from their Divine Source, they were made aware of the love the Divine held for them, they were assured that they were not being abandoned or cast out but simply separated for a short space of time into the vast newness of reality. They would contain within them the memory of the love of the Divine which would shine down upon them for all of eternity, waiting for the moment when they would return to their host, to their source, to the body, where they would be welcomed again with open arms and an open heart back into the country, into the cosmic form from which they had been born.

But as time progressed on Earth and the souls incarnated again and again and again, the heavy density of the material world began to have an effect upon the souls' consciousness. It began to take hold of them, it began to limit their perceptions of the truth, to tarnish their memory of their origin and to seemingly stretch the chasm that existed between them and their source further and further apart, darkening their awareness of the love that they once experienced and knew and interfering with their ability to sense the shining light of God's love that shone down upon them from on high. And as this was difficult for the souls themselves, it was even more difficult for their spiritual counterparts on Earth; for the souls, transcendent of the illusion of reality, still had their own awareness of divinity to comfort themselves and to remind them of the loving presence of their source. But their spiritual counterparts, their incarnate representations here on Earth, found it more and more difficult to remember this love and each incarnation saw them drifting further and further away from this awareness and deeper and deeper into the quagmire and illusion of a material world. Soon, isolation and separation pervaded all and the feeble attempts that mankind made to reconnect with the Divine were lost and confused in the politics of their religion.

As mankind now strives in this new age to accelerate its consciousness and move back to a point of evolution whereby it can in time return to the body of the Divine through the catalysis of its own evolutionary change, through the transformation of the planet and the universe in which it lives, it needs now more than ever before to remember the loving presence of the Divine, to remember the love of God, the Source, that extends from beyond the Source from the Source's creation, from the void, down to every man, woman and child, every flower, every tree, every blade of grass, every animal and insect, every shining spirit that exists beyond the spectrum of the eye. Now more than ever before the creatures of your world need to remember that they are loved and have been loved and were always loved by the Divine Source of which they are part; and that this love transcends condition, is not dependent upon religion or action or inaction, is not dependent upon spiritual progression or advancement, is not dependent upon social status, upon power or knowledge or finance. Now more than ever before mankind needs to remember the love that is part of them, to use it as a motivational force and power to power their return to the Divine Source.

A short time ago, a servant of the light, a channel known as Maybel Hopcroft, was asked to journey between the dimensions and to retrieve the sense of love that mankind once knew as a cell within the body of God and to anchor it back into our reality, back into our world. This return was brought about with three journeys that anchored the divine loving energy into three primary elements found here in your world: initially, through Ayers Rock into the physical earth structure of your planet, distributed by the ancient powers of this mysterious vortex, this sacred, pure and untouched land which contains within it so much of the original power of creation, of the Lemurian continent, that the energy of the Divine's love could be transmitted from this point of purity and power out to the physical, mineral structure of the world into the bones and bodies of mankind, so that they might feel again vibrating through their cellular structure the love of the Divine as it once vibrated in their souls as cells within the body of the Source.

Secondly the energy was distributed through the power of air and through those winged creatures sacred to the Divine, closest to the Divine's energy, the golden eagles, into the element of air itself so that it would be known in the minds of men and women, so that it would be pressed into the mental body of the globe, so that it would enter into the consciousness of mankind as a concept that will eventually lead them back to the pondering and to the assurance of the possibility of a benign and loving creator. And thirdly and finally through the waters of Niagara Falls back into the emotional body of the planet and to the emotional body of mankind, so that mankind might know as an emotional concept the truth of the presence of God's love within them, as the binding force that holds all living things of resonance together, that connects them and abolishes the illusion of separation which is a maya, an untruth.

This work was carried out astrally and physically, the servant of the Divine being used as a conduit, as a lightning rod, as a conductor, as a vessel through which this energy could pour forth into these planes. From this point on it will ignite a spark of divine fire within mankind completing the fourfold circle of the elements. This spark of passion born from remembrance will enable the true spiritual essence of mankind's divinity to be reborn; the fifth element, the element of spirit being born from the four that have carried the current of the Divine through the elements of the world and the elemental makeup of mankind back to mankind's own source, their souls, which hover on the outer perimeter of the Divine Source, their creator.

Others were instrumental in aiding Maybel with this work. Sacred places, sanctuaries, were used where the energy could be more safely accessed and grounded into the physical plane. This work was done in all love and trust and having begun now will continue to grow. Mankind now then must be made aware of the return of this presence, of the feelings that they have begun to feel, of the awareness that they have begun to remember and know. And they must more deeply access the power and the presence of this divine flow by entering out into the world, by touching the Earth, by smelling the flowers, by feeling the gentle breezes of the wind against their skin, by drinking the waters of sacred wells and springs and co-joining this power with their own blood by allowing the divine fire inside themselves to spark into a triumphant blaze and reawaken the memory of their soul rising like a phoenix from the ashes of its own forgetfulness, returning to this assurance of the divine presence.

This power will sweep not only through the children of the Divine that inhabit the Earth, not only throughout the children of the universe who have lost this connection and truth but also to the Earth as a consciousness itself and from her, through her, to other planets too, whose consciousness has become disconnected from the loving presence of the Divine.

The Earth, the Gaia spirit, so much in sympathy with mankind, also began to forget the truth as to the loving nature of its creator's spirit but the grounding of this energy has awoken these deep and distant memories and comforted and cosseted by this truth the Earth is renewed with greater energy and motivation to endure and transform in accordance with the Divine's plan. It is important that mankind now reawakens to this simple memory and is reborn. It is important now that mankind recognises this truth that is transcendent of all the religions of the world and unifies them perfectly as one ~ that God is Love and the love of the Divine is all around us.

Each morning then as you rise, as you enter out into the world, as you breathe the air and gaze into the sky, as you feel the sun and the earth beneath your feet, as you drink the replenishing waters of life that are drawn from sacred spring or kitchen tap, say this simple prayer. Call upon the cherubim who support this work as it is in keeping with the very nature of their spirit and draw upon this force unleashed by our great servant and great love.

Cherubim, weavers of the fabric of love, I reach out with mind and heart to you and through your grace commune with the eternal and infinite presence of God's love, remembering the ripples of its vibrations from the beginning of time and feeling them again now, deep within the core of my being, my heart. I know that I am God. I know that I am loved by God. I know that I am love and as such love eternal. And through this knowledge I am one with all and all is one with me. And through my desire to grow and expand and to become that that I am meant to be, I open my arms and embrace the spirit of growth in the world and play my part in turning the wheels of its evolution. This is my will. So mote it be.

Go forth, children of the Divine. Recognise the wisdom of our words. Go in peace, go in light, go in love.

The Archangel Metatron.
